EDITORIAL

What a fun-packed issue we have for you. I hope you like this cover. We had an office debate over it, of course. Nothing goes by here without a great deal of heated discussion. Some of our staff felt that it was not quite right to show a man dressed as a male on the cover. From time to time we have shown men dressed as men in the guts of the magazine — but never on the cover. Well, I feel this way: F.M.I. has to shift and change now and then even if to just create controversy. I don't think any of you out there are going to pick the magazine from the stands, fling it to the ground and spit upon the glossy coated cover.

Anyway, sometimes the presence of a virile young man can only help to underline the silky femininity of a "woman." In this case, I think that describes this photo exactly, don't you? I mean just look at the two of them, hard to believe they are the same sex. Well, if you like the cover, you will certainly like the layout inside as it is one of the racier we have done in quite a while. And if she-males with women are really more to your liking, don't despair for in the very next issue we have a sumptuous spread of Julie Bond looking absolutely fabulous with the exotic and mysterious Viper. . . a real woman.

So, yes, we are always trying to give you something new, something a little out of the ordinary and yet give you what you have always come to expect at F.M.I. — the most beautiful men in women's clothing.

The stills from Cleopatra, by the way, are from my latest epic and I hope you are on our mailing list so that you can take advantage of these great offers.

Extreme Detail

Dear Kim,

I finally got some new pictures taken. Here's a selection for you. These were taken on Aug. 13 at a friend's house.

The Friday before last Halloween I was invited out with two other TVs. I picked out a shimmering, royal blue dress and black patent pumps. I wore my black bra, panties, slip and suntan pantyhose.

When one of the TV's came to my door as his boyself, I felt like a girl being picked up for a big date.

The three of us rode down to Waikiki to another TV's apartment. In short order, the young man who had come to my door transformed into a very passable oriental woman. Unfortunately, the other TV was just too afraid to go out with us. Although he'd had a professional make-up job and did look better than he seemed to think, when one is lacking in experience these things do happen.

I think for some of us we have to go out and be read a time or two before we realize it won't cause us to melt like the wicked witch. For me, anyway, I had a fine opportunity to talk at length with some other TVs. To my surprise, they were most enthusiastic concerning the passability of my voice. Until this time I'd never used my voice in public. This night I just followed the advice on voice from one of your films. I think it was

"The Art of Femininity, Vol. 1."

With this encouragement I got myself a tape recorder and started really practicing. The easy part was keeping away from falsettos and lisping. The harder part is remembering just how to make the voice you worked on in your home come out of your mouth when you want it to outside. In time I felt ready to use it in public.

One Saturday in December, I woke up knowing this would be the day. On this day I wore a black, longsleeved blouse and a tan, suede skirt. I also wore for the first time some hip pads I'd made for myself. I found they looked good under suede or leather, but show little ridges under most fabrics. Under this tight, little suede skirt they looked great.

I loved zipping up the back of the skirt over my rounded ass. I wore my black patent pumps again with this outfit. I remember the restrictive feel of the skirt as I walked down to the bus stop. It has a back vent with three little metal snaps that when closed cause the garment to pull tight against the legs with each step.

Soon I was at the mall with thousands of people shopping and window shopping. I went into a little leather shop that had opened recently. They had lots of exciting leather items for both men and women. A young salesman came over and started showing me the many skirts and dresses. I engaged him in conversation for several minutes and really felt sky-high when I left. Not because I knew my voice had passed... I couldn't be sure of that... but because I knew I was no longer limited in regards to my voice.

Since then I've been eating lunch in little coffee shops when I go out as "Tracy," talking to waitresses, salesclerks, etc. Since I go out to one of the several malls here most every Saturday and Sunday, this is really good.

Let me describe the weekend of July 15 & 16 as a typical weekend in the life of Tracy, with some high points thrown in. I got up early, having shaved my legs and underarms the night before. I planned to look for a sleeveless, button-down top.

I put a stocking cap over my hair before starting to apply make-up. I bobby pin this in place as the elastic has a tendency to creep up. My hair is long and light brown and would look quite odd peeking out under the dark brown tresses of my wig.

My making-up ritual has been cut down dramatically from years past, since I no longer have a beard to worry about and am trying for a more natural look.

What I do, in brief, is put a little lipstick over my eyes, dark blue pencil eyeliner under my lower and over my upper lashes, brown powder eyeshadow on the lids (on top of the lipstick), with black in the crease and outer corners. Instead of following down the natural contour of the lids with the black, I go more straight across from the center of the lid crease and down from there at an almost right angle to the outer corner of each eye. This provides attractive "lift," but I'm careful not to overdo it.

I follow this with a thin line of jet black liquid eyeliner inside my lower lashes and over my upper ones. The upper line somewhat follows the form set by the black shadow, going almost straight over from the center of the eyelid to the outer corner and forming a wedge shaped line.

Several coats of mascara go on upper and lower lashes. I've retired my false eyelashes since I've found a mascara that makes my lashes very full and dark and I do believe mascara, no matter what the

"I loved zipping up the back of my skirt over my rounded ass."

amount, will always look more natural than the false eyelashes do.

Usually, I complete my eye make-up with a little pale pink blended down from under the brows and dark brown eyebrow pencil along the arch of the brows themselves. I have been keeping my brows plucked and trimmed into the neuter range this past year.

I put dark rouge in the hollow of my cheeks up to my hairline and blend a light shade down into this from the apple of my cheekbone. This narrows the look of my lower face and jawline. Then I add a lipliner to compliment the lipstick I will be wearing. Then I brush out my wig and put it on.

Anyway, this Saturday I put on two pairs of tight panties to hold me in place, then my pantyhose in my suntan shade. I use a waist cincher to get a nice, flattened stomach. I put on my white bra, camisole and half slip. With this done, some gazing at my pretty girlself in the mirror is in order.

I must tear myself away from this since there's more to come... luscious, satin finish lipstick... hmmm yummy. (I think these satin finish lipsticks are great and give one a thoroughly contemporary look.) Then I pop on some earrings and a little cologne.

So here I am on this morning, putting on a shimmery, black front button blouse. Next, I contrast this with an offwhite backzip skirt. It is tight, knee length and conservatively cut... sort of what a secretary might wear. It's looped for a belt, so I add a narrow black patent one, then those ubiquitous black patent pumps. (I do wear other shoes, honest!)

Skipping ahead, here I am at the shopping center. I've been looking, but can't find what I want. So I go into one of my favorite little stores there. While browsing, I come across a slinky little dress that really appeals to me. It is short, sleeveless, bright orange and made of elasticized material that will cling to me like a second skin. It has a black circle of the same material at top that can be worn around the neck or off the shoulders.

I hadn't planned to spend money on something like this so I browse around the store, but I keep coming back. Well, I guess I can try it on. I've been in the dressing room here before and like it. Each booth has a door with a latch and a seat to sit on. The whole back wall is covered with a floor to ceiling mirror. One can stand back there and see themselves on three sides. So, I weaken and in I go with the dress.

“A tremendous rush of ecstasy is overcoming me. I see my body wrapped into this dress, my feminine curves, my underwear lines. I am one of them.”

In the last booth on the aisle, I squeeze myself into this tight little number and look out over the door top. There standing in the rear area is an attractive young Amerasian woman with long black hair beholding herself in a nice career dress. She is modeling her outfit in a bewitchingly feminine manner. She looks at me and smiles a little, one girl to another smile. I am butter.

Seconds later I am there in her place. I am posing like she did and a tremendous rush of ecstasy is overcoming me. I see my body wrapped into this dress, my feminine curves, my underwear lines. I am one of them... a pretty girl among pretty girls. Guess what? I bought the dress.

The next day I went out again looking for blouses. Since it seems I can't find quite what I want in a sleeveless blouse, I plan to just look for two or three nice short-sleeved ones. I go to a different mall first and buy one there, then I go back to the other mall where I find a couple on sale in a major department store.

Now, while I'm waiting in line to purchase these, a salesgirl comes up to me and offers to help me at another register. So I follow her over there. Follow her, mind you, and she has her nice round ass inside a sexy, black leather skirt. She looks great. I'm feeling that I really want a skirt like that, perhaps in red. It's the form and feel of the leather I want to experience.

Now, in my defense, this wasn't completely impulse. I had wanted a skirt like this at least since I was in the leather shop last December. The problem there was price. I already have a line black mini, but I want something more like her's; good quality leather, form fitting and a little longer. I want it now!

I can't find what I want in this store so I go across the mall to a little shop that has the prices and selection I want. I try on several skirts here, finally deciding on a red one in a size 7. From trying them on it is obvious that leathers should be bought in a smaller size than ordinary fabrics. This is the first size 7 skirt I've ever owned. At about $90 it's also the most expensive.

This past Friday was a state holiday in Hawaii. I was off and would spend my day as Tracy. I arranged to meet two girls I know for lunch in a downtown restaurant. No surprises this time. They knew what to expect... lunch with the girls.

Since most of the offices were closed and we agreed to meet at 11 a.m., we were able to get a booth in a quiet corner. This was good since my companions made several slips; using the wrong pronoun or my boyname. I wore the skirted suit with the blouse just as pictured in the enclosed photographs.

I do drone on. Since you've asked for feedback on F.M.I., I'd like to add a few comments before closing. The best thing to me is an intangible quality. There is an overall acceptance, warmth and feeling of community we find here... something many of us are looking for.

I have seen comments, Kim, from other writers asking for more of this or less of that, but I feel a great asset of F.M.I. lies in it's appeal to a diverse readership. As a clothes-oriented dresser, there are things that may not appeal to me as a TV, but in a more general sense, I'm always interested in other people's stories, in other people's lives. In short, keep up the good work.

On this note, I'm afraid it's time to say...

Aloha,
Tracy

Dear Tracy,

You write letters just like I like. Long and interesting. Your detailed descriptions of your entire make-up scheme and dressing plan was delicious. Thank you for being generous enough to share so much of yourself with us and our readers.

Love,
Kim

Being Truthful to Yourself

Dear K.C.,

First, I think F.M.I. is a super magazine. Second, (on a more personal note) I've envied you since a performer at Chicago's Nite Life Lounge told me a little about you. I didn't perform there, but shilled drinks for the management (you know, sit on some laps, drink tea, & etc.). You did all of it the right way, I think, while I made almost every mistake. I hope my boners (whoops) might help some others.

I worked the lounge weekends and when I could sneak away from college studies. I looked okay, but didn't spend the time and effort to develop a real act (and, I was having fun dating). Instead, sometimes I did a short (not very good) routine on amateur nights. Also, I didn't want my folks to learn about what I did and toss me out of the house. They paid most of my college expenses.

Not long after that (about 1968 I think) I saw some features about you in the (former) Female Mimics Magazine. The photo spread of you was just super. You were the woman I wanted to be. You looked similar to, but better than Jane Fonda, and had that little bit extra. Unfortunately I was in the army then and couldn't get away to watch your show, do mime, date or

“Though born a male, in pursuit of a daughter,
my parents elected to raise me as a female.”

do much of anything fun.

I went out on my own after the army. Rebuilt my wardrobe, got back into the scene and began dating a couple of generous, hung guys. Later, to give them more, and make me look better, I tried hormones. Four months later, my tits were still small. Worst of all, I didn't enjoy sex much. Soon my friends decided to look for somebody else who would be more fun for them. Still, I kept on them for three years. By then my tits were larger, but I still didn't enjoy sex as much as before. I (finally) got the message and quit hormones.

I hope you use F.M.I. to warn young Queens they have got to be truthful to themselves about what they really want for their future, and avoid hormones unless they know gender surgery is for them. Hormones greatly reduced my sexual drive and enjoyment. Their effects cannot always be reversed.

For me, any future improvements will be courtesy of breast implants & the surgeon's knife. Thank goodness the atrophy of my penis and testicles was reversed and everything works again.

The best of luck for you and F.M.I.

Yours truly,
Kim

Dear Kim,

Thank you for reminding those folks out there what I so often feel obligated to say myself. Hormones and surgery are only for those who have gone through certain processes and inner work. It is a step not to be taken lightly.

Best,
Kim

A Unique Woman

Dear Ms. Christy:

Recent events concerning a good friend's teenage son have prompted this letter, which will hopefully impact positively a few of your younger readers.

Unlike many of our "sisters," I was very lucky. Though born a male, my parents, who'd already had two sons age four and two, in the pursuit of a daughter, elected to raise me as a girl. This was not a cavalier decision made on the spur of the moment. My mother and father were educated people, a gynecologist and endocrinologist respectively.

I was small at birth, six pounds, four ounces and only 15" long. There was no extended family; aunts, uncles or grandparents, just mom, dad, my two brothers and me. After several weeks of deep soul searching, my parents made their decision.

My first few years were without incident. Being doctors, my parents handled all my medical needs and at the age of five I was enrolled in kindergarten as a girl with no questions asked. By then of course I appeared as would any 5-year-old girl, pink dresses, hair in bows, certainly effeminate — no one gave it a thought.

Since they were but children when I was born, my brothers didn't know and were not made party to my secret. I had my own room and they never saw me nude. As far as they knew, I was their kid sister, plain and simple. Even though I knew I was unique among the girls, I didn't dwell on it — mom and dad treated me well and I trusted them.

Aside from raising me to think and act like a girl, my parents started me on hormones when I was six so my testicles never dropped and my voice never lowered. At fourteen, after my breasts had developed and my overall physical outline had become quite womanly, my mother began teaching me about makeup and hair. I loved the subjects and by the time I was sixteen I'd become quite proficient.

It was at sixteen that I reached the proportions I presently retain as a 27-year-old adult. 5'5", 115 lbs., and a size 34C. Of course these figures would capture the attention of any teenage boy and like any girl, I was finally faced with the subject of sex.

Naturally when it became apparent that I would be pretty, my parents broached the subject to me in their normal way; with an eloquent dissertation and a flurry of textbooks. My father, with my mother's blessing and supervision, taught me how to make love. I suspect this may bother some of your readers, but please let me stress that it only happened once, it was done in the spirit of love and learning, my mother was present, it has never been a problem and I respect them to this day for everything they've ever done for me.

I must confess however that I did enjoy it, and though I wouldn't let boys penetrate me anally, word soon spread that I loved oral sex. My brothers, by then in college, had of course been enlightened as to the unique nature of their sister, revelled in its erotic value and often brought over friends for me to service which I did, eagerly, until I was about twenty, when I met the man I've been with for the last seven years.

I work as a word processor for a busy Bay Area semiconductor company. A few weeks ago I was having dinner with a woman I work with; a dear friend. She revealed to me that she returned home from work early one day and found her 14-year-old son in makeup and wearing one of her dresses; there's no father in the home. She was

“Of course she didn't believe me, so we went into the ladies room where I showed her.”

devastated, hadn't a clue how to handle it and was not so much seeking advice as trying to ease her burden by sharing her “humiliation,” to use her word. It was then, for the first time in seven years, I revealed my unquity to another individual.

Of course she didn't believe me, so we went to the ladies room where I showed her. We talked late into the night and I steered her as best I could. She was an enthusiastic and responsive listener, and last we spoke, she was still trying to develop an objective, loving and supportive dialogue with her son.

It's tough for her, but at least she's trying, which brings me to my point. . . finally!! If I may address your younger readers, I've known many in your situation over the years. You're confused, lonely and feel that there's no one in whom to confide. . . consider this: No matter what facet of gender identification you're struggling with, be it transvestism, transsexualism or transgenderism, if you have any kind of rapport at all with your parents — tell them.

To be sure, you must choose your moment carefully, but if you get along, tell them. If you don't get along, share it with a relative you trust, a counselor, a responsible adult. If you confide in your parents, one of three things will happen:

1. They'll overreact and throw you out, but you know and fear that already.

2. They will not enjoy the news, but because they love you, they will work with you, probably try to talk you out of it, realize they can't, and just accept that aspect of your personality, as they would your interest in sports, music, engineering or gardening.

3. You'll get lucky and they'll accept it unequivocally without incident.

Looking at it this way, there's only a one in three chance that you'll be ostracized, but there's a two in three chance that you'll not be. The odds are in your favor.

I'll guarantee you this, if you don't act, and decide instead to closet yourself forever, the odds will weigh heavily and overwhelmingly against you that you'll ever be able to “come out” when you're older. . . after you're married with kids, after you've built a career, after you've cuffed yourself to a mortgage. I was lucky, but I've witnessed this grief in others. You'll never be young again. Who was it who said to “Seize the moment?”

It's your LIFE. . . make your move!
Thanks for the venue Kim.

Sincerely,
Jennifer

Dear Jennifer,

What a wonderful letter. I was so moved by your unique story and especially your sincerity, that I had to share this with our readers. I hope that your moving message is of some hope and comfort to those out there who suffer from loneliness and isolation. Thank you so much for your most personal viewpoint.

*Best,
Kim*

Big Sister Substitute

Poor Stevie. His big, bossy sister had to leave town and she COMMANDS him to fill in for her on one of her dates. Well, poor Stevie is terrified at first and then as his transformation progresses, we see a beautiful woman emerge. To order this scintillating video, please see our catalog section at the back of this magazine.

Paint powder and a lot of hair spray help to disguise Stevie's few masculine features. He turns from a sweet and somewhat shy young man into a hot harlot with a cascade of ebony curls that spill over his soft white shoulders.

All these magic tricks seem to work their spell on the horny Mr. Brick. He gets one look at Stevie and sees a slutty little bitch who looks like she needs a good fuck. Stevie's sister must have had this in mind when she picked this skin-tight dress and those stiletto heels.

Stevie is in awe of his own power and it seems to be out of control. Mr. Brick seems to have about twelve hands and Stevie only has two to fight him off. The result is that Mr. Brick finds something in this hot chick's panties that he did not expect. At first he looks as if he will explode in anger. Stevie cowers. And then as he looks down at the feminine form prone on the bed below him, we see his expression change. If it looks like a fish and smells like a fish, it might as well be fish. So with a little anger and a lot of lust, Mr. Brick pounces on poor Stevie and Stevie squirms under his well-built frame until his skirt is all up around his hips and Mr. Brick's hands are everywhere at once. We call this a happy ending.

Direct from the steamy set of Kim Christy's latest epic, "She-Male Tales," come the hottest stills we've printed in F.M.I. If you're on our mailing list, then you've received information on ordering these 30 minute videos directly from us. We won't be offering them in our catalog section so if you're interested, write to our P.O. Box for more information.

DRAG

Do's

Don'ts

The
unquestionable good taste of Kim Christy is brought back by popular demand.

Don't: Misalign your pasties.

Do: Avoid bell bottoms at all costs.

Do: Wear a hat in bright sunlight. It not only protects the skin, but gives you a little edge in the art of "passing."

Don't: Use liquid eyeliner. It's much too harsh. Use instead a soft crayon for a more blended look. Of course, if you LOVE liquid eyeliner, then all rules go out the door.

Do: Learn to cook. It's one of those homey crafts that can add so to the feeling of being feminine.
